Connecting the Dots Between Research and Specification to Implementation using NotebookLM

Overview

As part of my day to day role as a solution architect I overlap with many clients, partners, solutions and technologies. I am often documenting meetings, requirements, technical solutions and having to provide my team information for the sprint work to action the required goals for the client. Also in my case the development team is in Vietnam and non english native speakers.

There's a lot of challenges I face

- Having accurate documentation that is easy query, adapt and output in anyway I want

- Creating great output for the teams that overcome questions and technical or language barriers

- Maintaining information over multiple meetings and across different sources

I have created a video using NotebookLM of this blog post after publishing to show how it can easily create video outputs

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=E3IbCCQ-XA4

Enter NotebookLM, the Google AI research tool with amazing features

Think of NotebookLM not just as a note-taking app, but as a dynamic knowledge management system powered by the latest in AI. It's designed to take all your scattered information, understand it, and then help you synthesize it into something truly useful. Here are some of its core features that will make your dev heart flutter:

- Source Connectivity on Steroids: Forget copy-pasting entire articles or losing track of where that crucial snippet came from. NotebookLM lets you upload various sources – PDFs, Google Docs, even web pages – and treats them as a unified knowledge base. Imagine having all your project's architectural diagrams, API documentation, and sprint retrospective notes in one searchable, interconnected space. No more "where did I see that again?" moments. This is a game-changer for solution architects like me, who need to cross-reference multiple documents to ensure design consistency and avoid technical debt.

- AI-Powered Summarization & Key Takeaways: This is where the magic truly happens. Once your sources are loaded, NotebookLM can instantly generate summaries, extract key concepts, and even answer specific questions based on the content of your sources. Need a quick overview of the authentication flow discussed in three different design documents? Ask NotebookLM. Want to know the estimated effort for a particular feature based on your team's past sprint reviews? It can do that too. This feature is invaluable for developers trying to quickly grasp the essence of complex systems or for solution architects presenting high-level overviews to stakeholders.

- Intelligent Q&A and Brainstorming: Ever wish you could just talk to your documentation? Now you can! NotebookLM allows you to ask natural language questions about your sources. It's like having a rubber duck debugging session, but with an AI that actually understands your project's context. Beyond answering direct questions, it can also act as a brainstorming partner, helping you generate new ideas, explore different approaches, or even draft initial code snippets based on your project's specifications. Imagine asking, "Given these API specs, what are some potential error handling strategies?" and getting intelligent, context-aware suggestions.

- "Ask Your Sources" – The Ultimate Debugging Buddy: Picture this: you're debugging a tricky issue, and you're pretty sure the answer is buried deep within a technical spec or a previous incident report. Instead of endless scrolling and searching, simply ask NotebookLM, "What are the known limitations of the regarding concurrent requests?" It will scan all your connected sources and pinpoint the relevant information, saving you precious hours of head-scratching. This is where NotebookLM truly shines as a productivity booster for every developer.

UserService

- Multiple Outputs Allowing Many Ways To Absort: The sources fed in in to a Notebook can be outputted in many ways. Want an Audio output for a podcast or a video overview on any specific topic that can easily be created with Veo 3 giving flavour to the videos. Want to create a Mind map, a report, flashcard or quiz and you can do all this. It really allows you to output the documentation any way you like, empowering different ways of learning

- Notebooks for Every Occasion: Organize your knowledge into distinct notebooks for different projects, features, or even personal learning. This keeps everything tidy and ensures that your AI assistant is always focused on the relevant context. As a solution architect, I can create separate notebooks for each project, encompassing everything from initial discovery to deployment strategies, ensuring all information is readily accessible and logically grouped.

- Seamless Integration (with Google Workspace): If your team lives in Google Docs, you're in luck! NotebookLM integrates seamlessly, allowing you to easily pull in your existing documents and leverage your current collaborative workflows. This reduces friction and makes adoption a breeze.

How NotebookLM Benefits Your Learning and Investigation

I have been using NotebookLM to collate information on projects, technologies and integration in to a single source of truth that I can query and output in many different source.

In a very real example I have used a very cool extension called NotebookLM Web Importer https://chromewebstore.google.com/detail/notebooklm-web-importer/ijdefdijdmghafocfmmdojfghnpelnfn?hl=en to do the following for my own learning

1. Import all of Jon Jones Optimizely YouTube videos in to a NotebookLM for querying and exploration

2. Import each of the Optimizely document sections in to a NotebookLM for querying

3. Importing integration meetings from Integration overlap meetings a client has started using to generate formatted Requirements in text and video

For example here is the CMS 12 documentation

Optimizely - CMS 12

214 sources

The provided texts constitute extensive documentation for the Optimizely Content Management System (CMS), focusing on development, configuration, and integration, particularly concerning the shift to ASP.NET Core in CMS 12. Significant architectural changes are detailed, including the new logging system built on ASP.NET Core's framework, the retirement of features like VirtualPathProviders and IInitializableHttpModule, and the removal of support for running CMS as a virtual application in IIS. Furthermore, the sources cover advanced topics such as content modelling, including blocks and content types, the use of Dependency Injection and the Dynamic Data Store (DDS), and deployment scenarios ranging from single-server to multi-site load-balanced environments using Azure resources. Finally, the documentation thoroughly addresses the integration of Optimizely Graph for searching, Optimizely Data Platform (ODP) for personalization, and the Content Marketing Platform (CMP) for asset and content management, while also outlining numerous options for configuring the CMS user interface (UI), caching, and security features.

This is a really amazing tool and the fact it can do this from URLs, Documents, YouTube Videos and notes is amazing.

It also allows you take outputs from the chat and convert them in to notes or create your own notes then even reference them back as sources creating a great feedback loop.

`IServiceCollection` in the `Startup` class 46 .

• Caching: The internal object caching API evolved. If previously using `CacheManager`, developers should transition to `ISynchronizedObjectInstanceCache` 47 .

• Content Model/Property Loading: `IContentLoader.Get<TContentData>` returns read-only instances by default to reduce memory usage and improve performance; modifications require calling `CreateWritableClone()` 48 .

• HTML Helpers: Custom MVC extension methods for rendering content, like `Html.RenderEPiServerQuickNavigatorAsync()`, should not be used with response caching as it may cause stale content issues 49 .

• Template Selection (On-Page Editing): The logic for template selection during on-page editing changed. It now searches first for a template with the tag Edit, then a template with no tag. Templates only tagged Preview are no longer automatically searched for during on-page editing and must have the 'Edit' tag added if they were previously used for on-page editing 7 50 .

How NotebookLM Benefits Your Development Team (and Makes Your Solution Architect Happy!)

This also translates in to creating better documentation for the team you can copy in to DevOps, Jira or your solution of choice with rich mind maps, audio podcasts, video allowing faster and easier adoption of information.

- Faster Onboarding for New Devs: New team members can quickly get up to speed by having all project documentation, design decisions, and common FAQs consolidated and easily digestible through NotebookLM's summarization and Q&A features.

- Reduced Context Switching: Spend less time hunting for information across different tools and platforms. With NotebookLM, your critical knowledge is centralized, allowing you to stay focused on coding and problem-solving.

- Improved Design Cohesion & Reduced Rework: Solution architects can ensure that development teams are consistently referencing the latest approved designs and technical specifications. NotebookLM can highlight discrepancies or areas needing clarification, leading to more robust and aligned solutions from the get-go.

- Smarter Decision-Making: By quickly accessing and synthesizing information from various sources, teams can make more informed decisions, whether it's choosing a new technology, refining an architectural pattern, or resolving a critical bug.

- Empowered Developers: Give your developers the tools to self-serve information, reducing reliance on senior team members for basic queries and freeing up valuable time for more complex problem-solving.

- A Solution Architect's Dream: For us solution architects, NotebookLM is like having an extra brain. It helps us quickly synthesize complex information from multiple stakeholders, validate architectural decisions against existing documentation, and communicate design rationales more effectively. Imagine being able to instantly pull up all the discussions around a specific design constraint before a review meeting!

Conclusion

Using NotebookLM creates an amazing space for combining all of the information together and joining the dots. It allows output that you can consume as videos, audio (which allows for a podcast style custom learning), mid maps and note outputs. It really revolutionises learning and combining information and by plugging this in to development teams as well it creates a powerful place for many different activies either research, task planning or anything else.
